Nokia relaunched their smartphone brand and their partner HMC Global is now producing their devices for them and apparently it's working out better than most expected. In Q4, Nokia sold 4.4 million smartphones and claimed the #11 spot on the smartphones sales charts. Them being in the #11 spot puts them ahead of other big names like Asus, Lenovo, Google, Sony, HTC, and OnePlus. The sales seem to be selling well overseas and isn't gaining much in North America, but thanks to some strong sales early on we could see them making a push into North America shortly. The 4.4 million figure puts Nokia at the 11th position in the list of companies with highest market share. This also means that Nokia sold more phones in the last quarter than a lot of other popular brands. Some of the companies that sold lesser smartphones than Nokia are — Google, HTC, Sony, Alcatel, Lenovo, OnePlus, Gionee, Meizu, Coolpad and Asus.
