OnePlus has come a long way from their rather humble and irritating "lottery purchase" beginning. They are now up to their 3rd device and it's been pretty solid for them, but they aren't sitting back on their success. They are rumored to be working on an update that is basically a processor upgrade to their current OnePlus 3. This update will feature the Snapdragon 821 processor that is an 8-core CPU and comes clocked in at 2.4GHz.

A device with model number A3010 has already made its way through the China Compulsory Certification, similar to when devices pass FCC tests in the US. Confirmation that a new device is on the way also comes from a OnePlus designer, who published to his Weibo account from a device identified as the OnePlus 3T.
