The leaks have been trickling out regarding the upcoming iPhone 8 and it seems that Apple is stepping up their game to the level of Samsung with the new iPhone 8 design. The downside is that this device will cost about $1,000 USD. Keep in mind that is the starting price. It looks like the larger version will set you back at least another $100. It's not going to be cheap, but it looks almost as nice as the Galaxy S8.

The good news is, despite the price hikes, Goldman Sachs' report also confirms all the biggest and best changes Apple is expected to make to the iPhone 8. These include a massive new 5.8-inch OLED display, a "no bezel, all screen" design, removal of the home button, "biometric authentication" (position unknown), an A11 chipset and no 64GB option.
