Nine weeks ago the Raspberry Pi Zero W began shipping and has already hit the 250,000 units shipped mark. The Raspberry Pi camp has also announced another 13 additional distributors to try and help with the demand. BetaNews has the story.

It seems that the Raspberry Pi Foundation can do no wrong. Every new Pi it announces goes on to be a huge hit. The most recent model, the Wi-Fi enabled Pi Zero W, is a great example of this.

Launched just nine weeks ago, the Foundation announces that it has now shipped the 250,000th unit, and it is making the tiny board easier to buy by adding 13 additional distributors.
