The Nintendo Switch is doing very well. How well? Nintendo expects that it will beat out the lifetime sales of the Wii U - and do it in less than a year. That is great news for Nintendo and it shows just how dismal sales of the Wii U actually were. All that said, Nintendo does very well with their own IP as they have the top 5 rated games in the world.

According to a Reuters report, the company is now endeavoring to meet customer demand -- it's still not easy to buy a Switch in stores. "We've boosted Switch production in order to meet strong demand from our customers as it was difficult for customers to buy the consoles at retail stores," said Nintendo President Tatsumi Kimishima.
