While they are only a couple of months late, I really didn't think we'd see Apple's Wireless AirPods ship this year. They are now available to order through your favorite Apple Store and hopefully they have all the issues and bugs worked out - prior to people buying them and then treated like Beta Testers. On a side note, it is much better to delay the launch by a couple of months and get it right rather than release early and have people hating you for it. Hopefully, they got it right.

In a press release, Apple says that the AirPods "will be shipping in limited quantities at launch," and that brick-and-mortar stores "will receive regular AirPods shipments." AirPods will start appearing at Apple Stores, "select" carrier stores, and authorized Apple retailers next week. They're launching in over 100 countries, including the US, Australia, Canada, China, France, Germany, India, Mexico, and Japan.
