

Curved TV Review (Hint; they suck)

Written by Benjamin "Zeus" Heide
Tuesday, 31 January 2017 02:20 -

While curved TVs are garnering a lot of press from companies like Samsung, they certainly aren't for everyone and while some people have a perfect place for them, the real world can be much more different. While the specs and features look pretty attractive, it's a good idea to read reviews of products before you spend your money - as evidenced by this guy buying the "prettiest" TV and later regretting it.

On a sunny day there is exactly one cushion on our gigantic 12-person sofa from which you can see the picture on this stupendously awful television. And it's no better at night unless you turn off every single light in the room. Which is fine for late night movie watching, but impossibly annoying at all other times. Leave the couch to get snacks or another glass of wine, and you better remember to turn off any light you use or you'll be getting right back up again.

Source: TheVerge