While the iPhone X has a beautiful display, there are a few flaws that make it score a bit lower overall in customer approval. That is even without the higher price tag. The iPhone X is actually quite fragile and combined with poor battery life, it doesn't make it to the top of very many people wish lists. The fact is that even the iPhone 7 is probably a better option than the iPhone 8 or iPhone X. That's not good news at all for Apple.

If you're still on the fence, this is one of those times where it pays to try before you buy. Play with all of these phones in the store, paying attention to how much the gorgeous iPhone X display means to you and how you feel about learning new gestures—and then considering how often you've dropped previous gadgets on the sidewalk.
